Harold was the younger son of the British High Commissioner for the Solomon Islands, Charles M Woodford CMG, at the time he enrolled at HAC in January 1912. He was 19 and did not sit for his exams at years end, and also undertook the College Ambulance Class. His student card notes;

"This student is a fine lad, strong & willing, not clever. He left College to join his brother rubber planting in the Malay Straits".

He joined the 8th Battalion of the Royal Berkshire Regiment in England in February 1915 and as Second Lieutenant aged 22, was killed October 13, 1915. He is commemorated on the Loos Memorial, France.
