MASTER OF ARTS IN LITERATURE AND CREATIVE WRITING

The Writing and Research Centre at Western Sydney University offers a challenging, rigorous coursework and project-based Masters degree, combining criticism and creative work and leading to a Master of Arts in Literature and Creative Writing.

WHAT YOU'LL STUDY

By connecting creative writing practice to ideas and creative work from the arts and sciences, the University offers you the opportunity to think across creative, critical and disciplinary categories, and to produce either works of scholarship or creative writing (or related creative work that crosses into other areas including music, art, performance and film).

The centre is unique in Australia in the way it combines scholarship, authorship and expertise in publishing. The centre includes some of Australia's most celebrated writers (such as the novelists Gail Jones and Alexis Wright) and widely published literary scholars and critics with international reputations (such as Ivor Indyk, Chris Andrews and Anthony Uhlmann).

Western Sydney University is ranked above world standard in both the study of literature and creative arts practice. The centre houses the highly decorated literary press Giramondo Publishing and the pre-eminent literary review site in Australia, The Sydney Review of Books.

With outstanding resources, the University is able to offer multifaceted understanding of literature and writing. Teaching staff are world leaders in the field of practice-led research and research-led practice, and this carries with it our philosophy of deepening the understanding of both critical and creative practice by linking critical and creative thinking.

In short, the centre is one of the best places in Australia to either become a writer or to think in a critical and scholarly way about writing.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

This course will help students develop high-quality creative works or literary criticism. The writing skills and critical thinking developed are highly valued by employers across a range of areas that require high-level communication skills.
