

SUSTAINABILITY AND RESILIENCE 2030

DIGITAL ENGAGEMENT PLATFORM

‘Our Decadal Strategy Sustainability and Resilience 2030 details the reasons why, as a leading anchor educational institution deeply embedded in Greater Western Sydney, we must reimagine a more resilient, sustainable and prosperous future.’

---

The Sustainability and Resilience Decadal Strategy 2030 (SRDS) is a living document which provides overarching direction-setting for the University community but also encourages local actions on sustainability, social justice and inclusion, environmental stewardship and resilience.

What is the SRDS Digital Engagement Platform and why is it important?

- The Digital Engagement Platform forms part of the SRDS and is a mechanism to actively connect our Western Sydney University community in an iterative process of meaning making and engagement.
- This Platform provides an opportunity for all staff and students to raise the profile of and socialise their sustainability curriculum, operations, research and engagement initiatives under one cohesive umbrella.
- Submissions to the platform will also be leveraged to showcase our sustainability achievements and be submitted as part of our Times Higher Education Impact Rankings to consolidate our global performance.

Who should make submissions to the Platform?

We encourage all Schools, Institutes and portfolios to engage with the SRDS and Digital Engagement Platform and identify their sustainability achievements to date as relevant to the SRDS’s strategic actions and the UN Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

How do I submit my sustainability work to the Digital Engagement Platform?

It’s as simple as visiting our new Digital Engagement Platform website. On this page you can review information about the SRDS priorities and themes and the SDGs to see where your work aligns and view other work being done across the University with the shared goal of building a sustainable and equitable world.

Go to Engage and Contribute on the page to submit your work in a few short steps.
